WEEKLY USA GRAIN AND PROTEIN REPORT January 11, 2025

It was USDA WASDE week this week and there were some surprises. US corn yields were lowered which is moving production lower for 2024/25 which could bring 2024/25 corn production in lower than last year. US soybean yields were also lowered dropping production a little from December report but still higher on the year versus 2023/24. US winter wheat plantings are above what the trade had expected by about 2%.

US corn futures prices were up by about USD 8 m/t as the week ended with soybean futures up by USD 11 m/t and soymeal up by at least USD 10 m/t. US hard red winter wheat was up by almost USD 5 m/t with US spring wheat up by about USD 3 m/t.

US corn prices were at the highest level since last June with some experts feeling that corn prices could now be moving higher. US soybean export business is lower than expected for the week but 2024/25 is still above 2023/24 export levels. There wasn't much exciting news for US wheat this week – exports were disappointing, although wheat exports for 2024/25 are moderately up on 2023/24.

SECTION 2 --- FISHMEAL COMMENTS AND PRICES: PERUVIAN “INDICATION” FISHMEAL PRICES:

Fishing in the North/Central region of Peru has reached 2.17 million m/t leaving 337,000 m/t to go to full quota and 21 days to do it. Landing the full quota is looking more possible every day. Fishing on the new quota in the South region has reached 13,500 m/t which leaves close to 237,000 m/t to quota.

Some trade publications feel that the quota will not be finished due to the spawning season and the expected increase in juvenile fish which will lead to more mini-bans and possibly an end to fishing.

Very little market activity this week as buyers seem to be well covered while sellers don't have a great deal on hand for sale. However, if fishing stays reasonable, we could see more buying interest but probably at lower price levels. Super prime and prime prices are expected to stay firm due to the lower supply and higher buying interest --- lower grade prices could slide a little.
